For families and business owners, estate planning is about more than documents — it's about clarity, control, and continuity. John Inhulsen founded Inhulsen Law to help clients move forward with confidence, knowing their family, business, and legacy are well planned.

Serving West Michigan, Inhulsen works with families and closely held business owners who want thoughtful, practical plans that fit their lives and long-term goals. His planning-first approach begins by understanding what matters most, then guiding clients through clear decisions that reduce uncertainty and protect what they're building.

"When people understand their plan, they feel confident about the future," says Inhulsen.

Whether creating a first estate plan, updating an existing one, or planning for business succession, Inhulsen Law serves as a trusted guide — helping clients move forward with confidence and peace of mind.
